Intermediate Simulation Instructor Course

Dates 0830-1630
Tuesday, 10 September 2024

7
CPD HOURS

Suitable for Simulation instructors with an intermediate level of experience seeking to improve the quality of their debriefing skills.

Prerequisites Completion of Basic Simulation Instructor course, or equivalent.

Location HNE Simulation Centre, John Hunter Hospital Campus

Aim

This intermediate level course provides a continuing professional development opportunity for existing simulation instructors to build on their previous training and experience in debriefing and feedback conversations. In particular, this course will also focus on skills needed for difficult situations arising during debriefings.

Outline

Outline Debriefing is a vital component of education through simulation in healthcare, and is often considered the most challenging aspect of our work as instructors. This interactive course will explore and provide strategies to deal with challenging situations in debriefing, different debriefing approaches, how to choose objectives that match the participants' interests, presenting a structure based on the work of the Institute for Medical Simulation in Boston.

Content

Using video and simulated triggers, working in small facilitated group exercises, we will practice: • Identifying the performance gap and what to do with the explored mental frame • How to co-debrief and how to use your co-debriefer efficiently • A structured approach to difficult situations, such as the upset participant and the participant who doesn't 'buy in' • A view at blended debriefing techniques • Deepen our knowledge in human factors and patient safety
